MS Excel vs Google Sheets

A note from Janet

Spreadsheets are awesome for number crunching! They are useful for work and personal record keeping and organization. And there are two great choices: MS Excel and Google Sheets! Which one is best?

Both offer similar features as far as the number crunching is concerned. Both have their pros and cons.

One of the main differences is in the functionality. If you are in need of more advanced functions and work with massive amounts of data, I believe that MS Excel to be a better fit. However, if you just need a simple spreadsheet with basic functions, Google Sheets is a great choice!

Another differential is the collaboration ability. If you use any google software, you are aware of the ease of sharing. You are able to easily control who can see, edit and comment on your spreadsheets with ease. In addition, edits and comments can be seen in real time. Excel offers collaboration and sharing, especially with Office 365. So the gap is definitely closing

In addition...

Functions and formulas are what makes the spreadsheet such an amazing tool. Excel offers more functions and formulas than Google Sheets. Especially when it comes to advanced functions and formulas.

Investment is another consideration. Google sheets is free. Whereas Excel requires a one time payment or monthly subscription.

However, the bottom line is that the best option is the one that you are going to use. Both have pros and cons and which is best depends a lot on what the end result.
